

Our Approach to Business

We believe in delivering on our promises and we work hard to ensure this is true, every time. That's how we build the long-term relationships that are so important to us.

Brett has been looking forward since 1909. We have since grown through a combination of acquisition and continuous investment over the long-term - placing a high importance on working with all of our key stakeholders to maintain our strong reputation and to develop the skills, knowledge and relationships that differentiate the business.

Our aim is to develop our core business, hand in hand with the expertise and quality of our teams, in order to create sustainable growth for the future. Our independent status and spirit of entrepreneurship means that we can take the long-term view - something we feel particularly strongly about. This, together with our enduring relationship with the land that we work and then restore, means we place a strong emphasis on delivering on our commitment to the environment, community and to the people with whom we work.

We are determined to operate our business at the highest standards day-to-day, providing quality and reliability to our customers at a fair price and right on time. Through offering a professional and personal service, we aim to be the first choice and a preferred partner, achieving the best standards in our products, customer care and operations, paying attention to detail and most importantly - doing what we say we will do.

Brett is able to be different because it is not a plc - and this will continue to drive our independence in decision-making. Throughout the organisation we take pride in being accountable and responsible in the way we build business relationships.
